paying Rs. 10 or so as overtime allowance to their daily wage employees;

(b) whether it is also a fact that Central Government are paying maximum of Rs. 3.45 per hour as overtime allowance to their employees;

(c) if so, what are the reasons therefor; and

(d) by when Government propose to bring the Central Government at par with those organisations in regard to the overtime allowance?

THE PRIME MINISTER (SHRI VISHWANATH PRATAP SINGH): (a) The daily rated muster roll workers of CPWD and other organisations who are covered under the Minimum Wages Act are entitled to Overtime Wages under the Act which works out approximately to Rs. 10/- per hour.

(b) to (d) Regular Central Government employees are governed by separate orders for compensation for extra work. Pending formulation of the modalities of implementing the recommendation of the Fourth Central Pay Commission to discontinue the system of payment of Overtime Allowance in Government offices, compensation for extra work beyond office hours is allowed to them as per the existing orders on the notional pay in the pre-revised pay scales/pay slabs and the maximum rate is now at Rs. 3.45 per hour for office staff. There is no proposal to bring these employees under the Minimum Wages Act for Overtime wages. However, the modalities of introducting extra work allowance based on pay in the revised pay scales/pay slabs are in the process of finalisation.
